

WHAT REMAINS

Voices from the Margins of History

Curated by Jackie Madison from the collection of the Clinton County Historical Association

What Remains: Voices from the Margins of History invites visitors into a powerful visual archive of African American life in the Adirondack and Lake Champlain region during the early twentieth century, captured through the lens of photographer Daniel S. Brush. This exhibit illuminates individuals whose stories have often gone unrecorded, yet whose presence shaped the cultural fabric of the North Country. This is an invitation to honor the enduring legacy of those who lived, loved, and contributed meaningfully to the region—ensuring their voices are no longer at the margins, but central to our shared understanding of the past.
